collected interviews with the nobel prize winner in which she describes herself as an african american writer and that show her to be an artist whose creativity is intimately linked with her african american experience contributions by alice knox eaton mar gallego maxine lavon montgomery evelyn jaffe schreiber shirley a stave justine tally susana vega gonzález and anissa wardi in her eleventh novel god help the child toni morrison returned to several of the signature themes explored in her previous work pernicious beauty standards for women particularly african american women mother child relationships racism and colorism and child sexual abuse god help the child published in 2015 is set in the contemporary period unlike all of her previous novels the contemporary setting is ultimately incidental to the project of the novel however as with morrison s other work the story takes on mythic qualities and the larger than life themes lend themselves to allegorical and symbolic readings that resonate in light of both contemporary and historical issues new critical essays on toni morrison s god help the child race culture and history a collection of eight essays by both seasoned morrison scholars as well as new and rising scholars takes on the novel in a nuanced and insightful analysis interpreting it in relation to morrison s earlier work as well as locating it within ongoing debates in literary and other academic disciplines engaged with african american literature the volume is divided into three sections the first focuses on trauma both the pain and suffering caused by neglect and abuse as well as healing and understanding the second section considers narrative choices concentrating on experimentation and reader engagement the third section turns a comparative eye to morrison s fictional canon from her debut work of fiction the bluest eye until the present these essays build on previous studies of morrison s novels and deepen readers understanding of both her last novel and her larger literary output thirty years of interviews with the author of the bluest eye song of solomon beloved and other novels in the struggle for a better world setbacks are inevitable defeat can feel overwhelming at times but it has to be endured how then do the people on the front line keep going to answer that question hannah proctor draws on historical resources to find out how revolutionaries and activists of the past kept a grip on hope burnout considers despairing former communards exiled to a penal colony in the south pacific exhausted bolsheviks recuperating in sanatoria in the aftermath of the october revolution an ex militant on the analyst s couch relating dreams of ruined landscapes chinese peasants engaging in self criticism sessions a political organiser seeking advice from a spiritual healer civil rights movement activists battling weariness and a group of feminists padding a room with mattresses to scream about the patriarchy jettisoning self help narratives and individualizing therapy talk proctor offers a different way forward neither denial nor despair her cogent exploration of the ways militants have made sense of their own burnout demonstrates that it is possible to mourn and organise at once and to do both without compromise new york times best seller a beautiful arresting story about race and the relationships that shape us through life by the legendary nobel prize winner for the first time in a beautifully produced stand alone edition with an introduction by zadie smith a puzzle of a story then a game when morrison called recitatif an experiment she meant it the subject of the experiment is the reader zadie smith award winning best selling author of white teeth in this 1983 short story the only short story morrison ever wrote we meet twyla and roberta who have known each other since they were eight years old and spent four months together as roommates in st bonaventure shelter inseparable then they lose touch as they grow older only later to find each other again at a diner a grocery store and again at a protest seemingly at opposite ends of every problem and at each other s throats each time they meet the two women still cannot deny the deep bond their shared experience has forged between them another work of genius by this masterly writer recitatif keeps twyla s and roberta s races ambiguous throughout the story morrison herself described recitatif a story which will keep readers thinking and discussing for years to come as an experiment in the removal of all racial codes from a narrative about two characters of different races for whom racial identity is crucial we know that one is white and one is black but which is which and who is right about the race of the woman the girls tormented at the orphanage a remarkable look into what keeps us together and what keeps us apart and how perceptions are made tangible by reality recitatif is a gift to readers in these changing times sarah lewis unearths the critical moment when americans were confronted with the fictions shoring up the nation s racial regime and learned to disregard them when popular nineteenth century images of the caucasus proved the lie of white supremacy a new visual regime arose to suppress the evidence of the incoherence of racial order an unlikely literary friendship from the past sheds light on the radicalization of public debate around identity race and censorship in 1961 james baldwin spent several months in william styron s guest house they wrote during the day then spent long evenings confiding in each other and talking about race and identity in america during one of those memorable evenings baldwin is said to have convinced styron to write in the first person the story of the 1831 slave rebellion led by nat turner near styron s own southern birthplace styron followed his friend s advice and the confessions of nat turner was published to critical acclaim winning the pulitzer prize in 1968 also creating outrage in part of the african american community more than sixty years later the debates and controversy around cultural appropriation identity and the rights and responsibilities of the writer still resonate in baldwin styron and me mélikah abdelmoumen considers baldwin and styron s surprising yet vital friendship from her standpoint as a racialized woman born in canada to a tunisian father and québécois mother and torn by the often unidimensional versions of her own identity put forth by today s politics media and society considering questions of identity race equity and censorship and especially the means by which public debate around these topics is increasingly radicalized abdelmoumen works to create a space where the answers are found by first learning how to listen even in disagreement examines the life and work of the successful novelist who became the first african american woman to win the nobel prize in literature in 1993 contains first editions of translations of selected works by toni morrison
